Filmscreening: „Die Geschichte der
Refugee Bewegung in Österreich
2012/13“

The film is about the impressive protest movement of the refugees in Austria in 2012/2013. The documentary shows the movement from its beginning with the march from Traiskirchen to Vienna in fall 2012 until the current situation in the Protestcamp Vienna in Servitenkloster. So far, the demands for a humanitarian right of residence have been ignored by a racist regime of politics. The film shows the first part of the struggle – which will hopefully continue in order to realize human rights and also in order to make Austria more democratic.

Filmscreening: New York

The film explores the aftermath of 9/11 in New York and is about post-9/11 prejudices about muslim people. The story begins in the United States in 2008, with the arrest by the FBI of Omar Aijaz, a young muslim man, after guns were found in the trunk of a taxi cab he owned. Omar then discovers that he was set up by the FBI in order to force him to spy on a former college friend whom he hasn't seen in seven years and who the FBI believes is a terrorist.
